Describe Arctic and Aquatic Animals: Examples

Aquatic animals (The list of arctic animals is at the bottom of this page )

- I once swam with a dolphin and it was such a wonderful experience! I would like to do this again!
Besides, dolphins are so cute and welcoming.
- I am always scared of jellyfish when I swim in the Mediterranean Sea. I don't want them to sting me. However, I like the way they look.
- I think that starfish are beautiful. Nevertheless, I wouldn't want to own one as a pet.
- Salmon is delicious but I don't like lobsters despite their expensive price.
- A sea horse is a small marine fish and not a mammal like a horse. Even though it looks cute, it is in fact one of the deadliest predators in the ocean according to this article.
- Sea turtles are as slow as their land counterparts.
- I wouldn't want to meet a water snake while swimming in the lake.
- It's amazing how much marine life rivers, lakes, oceans and seas have! Think of sea lions, frogs, shrimps and snails, just to mention a few!

We can also use the above Adjectives to describe arctic and aquatic animals.

Let's look at a few examples:

- A dolphin is a cute and friendly marine mammal. Yes, it is a mammal and not a fish. It actually uses its lungs to breathe just like us. This is actually amazing! (You can learn more about dolphins here.)
- Sea horses are deadly predators even though they look adorable.
- I am always scared of being stung by a jellyfish. Yet, these animals don't look aggressive at all! They are rather beautiful, I should say.
- Turtles and snails are generally slow animals unlike water snakes.
- Sea lions look huge like beluga whales.
- It said that most sharks are not that dangerous for human beings.
- Many arctic animals are endangered and threatened species such as the polar bear.
- The arctic tern is a very courageous bird that migrates from the Arctic circle to the Antarctic circle every year, making a trip of about thirty thousand kilometres. You can learn more about this here.
- Puffins and not penguins live in the Arctic regions. Puffins are as gorgeous as penguins though.
